CONNECTING WITH COMMUNITY

Communities are defined by connections. The Bay Area's rich heritage of cultural and civic diversity has created a vibrant collection of advocates, leaders, and philanthropists. As a community foundation, we play an integral role in strengthening these cultural ties, and work diligently to bind our common humanity through philanthropy.

DISCOVER HOW WE CONNECT WITH THE BAY AREA

STRATEGIC, RESPONSIVE GRANTS – We fund more than 780 nonprofits across the Bay Area each year. Our grantmaking is strategic and responsive to the changing needs of the region. We focus on six core areas:

Arts and Culture	Social Justice
Community Health	Education
Environment	Community Development

INITIATIVES – Our strong connection to the community drives these forward-thinking initiatives:

Impact Funds – Working together with our donors to address critical needs in the Bay Area

Foundation Initiatives – Delivering solutions to specific community needs through the expertise of our Program staff

Koshland Civic Unity Program – Supporting neighborhood-focused work with grassroots leadership development

PUBLIC POLICY – We believe it is essential to engage in systems change and policy issues that affect our communities through:

- Impacting public/private partnerships and legislation
- Convening diverse leaders in meaningful conversations
- Improving participation in the democratic process
- Supporting broad-based funding initiatives

BUILDING CONNECTIONS + OUR ROLE AS A COMMUNITY FOUNDATION

The Bay Area is a remarkable place to call home. As a community foundation, we are fortunate to work closely with the many inspirational people and effective nonprofits devoted to the region. Their voices deserve to be heard in our community. It is our job to connect these people, with their strong ideas and passions, to resources that will amplify their voices.

The Foundation is a bridge between nonprofits and resources, neighborhoods and government, leadership and those in need. This report illustrates the many ways we connect with our community. Our partnership with Mayor Gavin Newsom and other elected officials, the business community, labor, and health providers on the issue of health access is one example. We worked closely with these community leaders and public servants to build a common agenda with a tangible plan to care for the 82,000 San Franciscans without healthcare. It was an incredible opportunity to set a large table with a grand vision, backed by sound data and research.

Collaborations such as this demonstrate how the diverse communities of the Bay Area pioneer innovations that often seed here and spread across the nation. The Foundation's hallmark is its ability to bring about concrete results by nurturing new ideas. With the guidance of our Board of Trustees, we use our programmatic expertise to partner with organizations dedicated to solving real, everyday problems.

We achieve these solutions by connecting our donors with nonprofits to ensure that the voices of our region continue to be heard. Our donors are a part of our philanthropic family and often use their knowledge and insight in collaboration with our Program staff. We pride ourselves on being an agile and nimble community foundation – in concert with our partners we articulate a vision, convene leadership, and make sure everyone benefits.

A central part of our mission is to be a catalyst for change – as you look back over the last year and forward to the next, there are many reasons to be hopeful. In the midst of transformations across the nation, we are reminded that the cultural diversity of the Bay Area has built a robust civic society. The future excites us, and we hold ourselves to a very high standard for enabling change that enhances community connections, builds consensus, and strengthens civic life across the region.

ARTS & CULTURE + DIVERSE ARTISTIC PRACTICES

The Bay Area is fertile ground for both culturally and artistically diverse art. The Fund for Artists highlights the needs of individual local artists and supports opportunities for their growth. In partnership with our donors, we expand the creative influence of art across communities.

TRANSCENDING BOUNDARIES

Black spacemen play comical games of basketball around a barren tree, while nearby, a pyramid of basketballs is stacked below prison guard towers on the edgy canvases of David Huffman, a Bay Area artist and teacher. David's politically conscious paintings are gaining recognition both locally and around the world. He is an emerging artist supported by the Fund for Artists' grants to organizations like Artadia.

Founded in 1997 by Chris Vroom, Artadia has created a national network of local artistic programs that provide artists with critical financial support and wider recognition. At the core of this network are artists identified on artistic merit. "Our artists are awarded based on a rigorous process. We maintain high quality standards and engage the entire artistic ecosystem – artists, curators, dealers, collectors, museum folk, and the general public," said Chris.

Artadia goes beyond simply awarding grants. Through its network it helps artists to find dealers and sponsors training in professional development and copyright law. Artists are challenged to transcend local boundaries; Artadia facilitates this by providing access to decision-makers and curators both nationally and worldwide.

To date, the Fund for Artists has awarded more than $1 million in grants to 148 Bay Area artists like David. These artists enrich our community and challenge us to forge new, creative impressions of the world.

Donors like Elaine McKeon (left) help artists like David Huffman (above) achieve the support and recognition they need to create their art.

MoAD – THE STORY OF HUMANITY

Seen up close, all 2,700 sepia-toned photographs are unique portraits of leaders, heroes, and artists, including both famous and regular folk. Together they comprise a two-story-high collage of faces from the African diaspora that peer out at San Francisco from behind the Museum of the African Diaspora’s (MoAD) plate glass façade.

Only after exiting the building and walking across Mission Street does the startling composition of the collage become evident. From that vantage, all the faces meld into one: a young African girl with plaintive eyes.

The Arts and Culture program is proud to fund the Museum’s exploration of the art, culture, and history of the African Diaspora. Since the Museum’s opening in the spring of 2006, more than 35,000 visitors have experienced the videos, artwork, historical artifacts, educational tools, and performances celebrating this universal story of humanity.

A LIFE IN ART

Elaine McKeon is an irresistible force in the San Francisco art world. President of SFMOMA for five years and its chair for nine years, she works tirelessly to strengthen its reputation as a world-renowned institution of modern art. Elaine appreciates the opportunities SFMOMA presents for established artists but also feels it is essential to support the work of emerging artists in the region. “That’s why I support the Fund for Artists,” said Elaine. “Individual artists struggle financially. They need support and recognition. John Killacky, the program officer for Arts and Culture at the Foundation, recognized a problem and went out and did something about it – I respect him for that.”

Elaine also gives to the Museum of the African Diaspora. “MoAD is a great museum, a wonderful addition to the South of Market neighborhood. My donor advised fund at the Foundation makes it easy for me to support these vibrant artistic experiences in San Francisco.”

COMMUNITY HEALTH + OPENING DOORS TO HEALTHCARE

Access is everything. Without access to physicians, clinics, and dentists, individuals suffer – and the community as a whole bears the moral and financial burdens. Our goal is to broaden comprehensive access to healthcare for the entire region.

LEADING WITH A SMILE

Kids don't gleefully scream and run to the front of the line – as they do for the ice cream truck – when the Ronald McDonald Care Mobile™ rolls onto their school parking lot. Yet this mobile dental clinic plays an essential role in keeping their teeth healthy enough to enjoy ice cream cones, and more nutritious food, far into the future. Targeting children who do not receive proper dental care, the dentists and clinicians on board not only fill cavities and clean teeth, but also educate students on proper oral healthcare.

This mobile clinic, which is run by the Contra Costa Dental Collaborative, is just one way that the Foundation's Oral Health Initiative opens doors to care. It will benefit low-income residents of all ages who lack access to dental care.

COVERAGE = ACCESS

In the United States 45 million people live without health insurance in an untenable condition of human suffering and financial instability. As our nation and states strive to address the issue, The San Francisco Foundation took action and partnered with government, business, labor, philanthropic, and nonprofit leaders to tackle the problem locally. San Francisco Mayor Gavin Newsom appointed San Francisco Foundation CEO Dr. Sandra Hernández and Lloyd Dean, CEO of Catholic Healthcare West, to co-chair his Universal Healthcare Council, comprised of more than 40 thought-leaders from every sector. The first major city in the nation to create a solution, we crafted a comprehensive plan to provide healthcare to all of San Francisco's 82,000 uninsured residents.

As a community foundation, we embrace opportunities to help frame policies that affect the residents we serve. Tangerine Brigham, as San Francisco Foundation Program Officer for Community Health, was instrumental in developing the plan. She is now working for the City and County of San Francisco to implement it. As the solution has drawn increasing national, state, and regional attention, many communities are exploring ways to collaborate across sectors and replicate this innovative model for their regions.

BEYOND GIVING

In 1960, Doris Martin Miller opened a trust fund at The San Francisco Foundation to support low-income residents suffering from cancer. Forty-four years later, her wishes are still being carried out. More than $200,000 is granted annually from the Doris Martin Miller Trust to organizations providing access to health information, early detection and intervention, and end-of-life care for cancer patients. Since its inception, the trust has opened doors to care through funding programs like the Charlotte Maxwell Complementary Clinic, American Cancer Society, and the Pathways Hospice Foundation. Doris Martin Miller’s legacy lives on, continuing to provide access to quality healthcare.

Good oral health is seen as a gateway to overall health. Yet there are many barriers to obtaining oral healthcare – especially for people of color, children, or those who are disabled, elderly, low-income, or living in rural areas. Eight organizations were granted a total of $680,000 last year to enhance oral healthcare in the counties we serve. Over the next three years, the Oral Health Initiative will continue to support organizations that open doors to care.

DISASTER RELIEF

When compelling circumstances necessitate support beyond the Bay Area, we open funds to partner with our donors and work with local organizations both here and in the affected areas. KOSHLAND CIVIC UNITY PROGRAM

9 grants totaling $450,000.

The Koshland Civic Unity Program celebrates local leaders committed to improving their neighborhoods and awards them a grant to fulfill that vision. The Koshland Program makes a five-year, $300,000 commitment to a neighborhood and works with its residents in their efforts to build a stronger community. The Koshland Committee chose not to select a new neighborhood in 2005, but instead to strengthen its commitment to the growth and sustainability of past, current, and potential Koshland neighborhoods through additional grantmaking. The first round of grants to the neighborhood selected in 2006, Bayview in San Francisco, will be determined this year.

The current Koshland Program neighborhoods are:

ENVIRONMENT + LIVABLE COMMUNITIES

Smart sustainable growth is integral to our goal of protecting and preserving the environment. Parks, open space, and local waters are interdependent with development: creating green, livable communities softens the human impact on natural resources.

SMART DEVELOPMENT = HEALTHY HOMES

Each year, poorly planned urban sprawl creates subdivisions that snake farther and farther away from urban centers. Over the last 60 years this growth has become a root cause of traffic congestion, polluted air, and paved-over farms and natural areas in the Bay Area.

As part of the “rebirth of the city” phenomenon that has swept the nation, one-third of the current housing demand in the Bay Area is for homes near transit. These locations are magnets for small businesses and neighborhood-oriented retail. When jobs, housing, and shops cluster around transit stations, vibrant and livable communities spring to life. Voters in the region served by the Metropolitan Transportation Commission have approved investing $12 billion in public transit. Spurred by this investment, 75 local governments will begin planning for development around transit stations and along bus corridors in the next three years.

Our newly launched Bay Area Livable Communities Initiative focuses on influencing these 75 disparate plans by presenting alternatives to sprawl. The Initiative envisions smart development around public transit with ample affordable housing, creating healthy new communities within existing Bay Area cities and towns. By funding and providing technical support to organizations, our San Francisco Foundation team, including Jeremy Madsen, coordinator, and Arlene Rodriguez, program officer, work closely with local officials, nonprofits, and residents to craft both environmentally sustainable and socially equitable development.

FIGHTING URBAN SPRAWL

On Sunday afternoons at Fort Funston in San Francisco, hang gliders soar over the sea as hikers walk the trails and dogs romp below on the soft sand. Protecting natural areas is a core goal of Greenbelt Alliance. Fort Funston was one of its early success stories, establishing its reputation as an advocate for preserving open space in the Bay Area while also ensuring that development in the cities creates smart, vibrant, livable communities.

Greenbelt Alliance has helped protect more than 1.1 million acres of Bay Area open space and established urban growth boundaries around 22 Bay Area cities and five counties.

Through its partnership with the Bay Area Livable Communities Initiative, Greenbelt Alliance actively involves local communities in planning development around transit stations like BART and Caltrain. “We reach out to local organizations to get them involved in shaping city plans and make sure residents are connected, their voices are heard, and they get involved in the process of developing affordable housing across the income spectrum,” said Kate O’Hara, a regional issues organizer.

LABOR OF LOVE

During San Francisco’s internet boom of the 1990s, Jonathan Nelson was ahead of the curve. He co-founded Organic in 1993 as the nation’s first web-based business and since then has led the company on its impressive trajectory. Yet he always knew he wanted to give back to the community. “In the early 90s I had some money to invest, and a good friend recommended I check out The San Francisco Foundation.”

San Francisco is his family’s home, and Jonathan has a stake in its future. He felt that the infrastructure and expertise of the Foundation were a perfect match for his philanthropic interests. His commitment to protecting the environment is reflected in his support for organizations like Friends of the Urban Forest, Greenpeace, and the National Park Foundation. “This is the world we live in. Keeping it healthy for my children and my children’s children is very important to me.”

Jonathan’s dedication to the city goes beyond the traditional avenues of philanthropy. With Warren Hellman, he co-produces the free Hardly Strictly Bluegrass concert each year in Golden Gate Park, which Jonathan describes as “a total labor of love.” Jonathan also helped found San Francisco Connect, which coordinates volunteers who dedicate a day to the city through programs like serving the homeless or planting flowerbeds in the park. Jonathan acts with the next generation in mind. He is civically engaged in the life of his community – and, as a father, feels the importance of passing these core values on to his children.

SOCIAL JUSTICE + IMMIGRANT AND FAITH COMMUNITIES

Continuous waves of immigrants contribute to the economic and cultural wealth of the Bay Area. By strengthening the civic participation of local immigrant communities, we sustain the region's rich history and promote human rights and democracy.

LEADERSHIP THROUGH ACTION

Over the years, the Bay Area's view of immigration has mirrored the aspirations of our entire nation: that we can embrace the democratic ideals of the United States while retaining our own cultural values and identities.

September 11th remains a tragic event in our history. While the nation united in many ways, we must now join forces to ensure that Muslim, Middle Eastern, South Asian, and Arab American communities do not suffer resulting racial profiling and discrimination.

The San Francisco Foundation initiated a collaborative fund, housed at Asian Americans/Pacific Islanders in Philanthropy. The Evelyn and Walter Haas, Jr. Fund, Firedoll Foundation, Peninsula Community Foundation, Rosenberg Foundation, The San Francisco Foundation, Wallace Alexander Gerbode Foundation, Walter and Elise Haas Fund, and the Y and H Soda Foundation are funding partners.

Grants totaling $129,000 went to 17 grassroots nonprofits to build their capacity to engage and educate their communities. These pivotal cultural hubs will help their communities become active members of our diverse Bay Area family.

FAITH IN ACTION: A DECADE OF SUCCESS

Since 1993 The San Francisco Foundation has partnered with its network of more than 650 congregations, faith-based agencies, and community-based organizations to build strong, equitable, and inclusive communities. As we celebrate the transition of the FAITHS Initiative into the Social Justice Program area of the Foundation, we highlight its accomplishments over the last decade:

- Developing young leaders through the FAITHS Youth Leadership Program, with more than 160 young people participating in summer programs that promote academic success and hands-on work in philanthropy and the nonprofit sector.

Initial grants from the fund went to 17 nonprofits in these communities, totaling $129,000. Organizations at the grassroots of development were selected to build their capacity to engage and educate their communities.

- Creating affordable housing through training and financial support for faith-based organizations working to change local and state policy and to increase safe, decent, and affordable housing.
- Promoting civic engagement through the Community Partners Program mini-grants to support congregations that strengthen the diverse economic and civic fabric of local neighborhoods and communities.
- Building immigrant civic leadership by hosting community engagement events highlighting immigrant stories and the contributions immigrants make to the Bay Area.
- Supporting disaster preparedness training and planning for congregations, faith-based organizations, and neighborhood residents.
- Supporting FAITHS Arts projects through mini-grants to diverse ethnic communities and congregations.

BUILDING MOMENTUM

John Crew believes in the ground-up philosophy of social change. “Significant cultural shifts don’t come about because of some decision in Washington,” said John. “These innovations come from individuals and organizations at the grassroots creating energy, buzz, and momentum – until change is inevitable.”

John and his wife, Sheila Gadsden, have a deep commitment to social justice. During their search to maximize their giving, they met with Program Officer Ron Rowell. “Ron’s expertise is a perfect fit for us,” said John. “It’s unusual for a community foundation to have an entire program focus on social justice. We tap into that expertise to find new opportunities for our philanthropy.”

Tackling issues like the desperate situation of the state’s criminal justice system is a passion John and Sheila share. They believe that targeting grants to the right organizations may provide the spark to ignite cultural and political brushfires, which in turn will create the momentum and energy to bring about lasting change.

EDUCATION + CHANGING LIVES

Approaching public education improvement through systems change, we never overlook the impact that small programs can have on community. Our focus is on changing policy, while promoting innovative solutions through community school partnerships.

CULTURE SHIFT AT MISSION HIGH SCHOOL

Scott Kennedy needed to do something. In the summer of 2003 kids were getting shot, and gang violence was hot on the streets of San Francisco's Mission District. Scott, athletic director at Mission High School, pulled out his personal credit card and hauled 11 kids to a soccer camp at Sonoma State University. This was a moment of transformation.

Scott was frustrated that student athletes had no organized activities for the summer. That frustration was compounded by his dismay at the number of kids who lacked vision, confidence, or financial ability to attend college. Scott's first trip four years ago evolved into the Athletic Scholars Advancement Program (ASAP), which thrives on the passion and energy of its director, Judy Grossman. This year, 112 students from Mission High attended summer programs ranging from a pre-med overview course at Cornell, to a girls' basketball camp at UC Santa Cruz, to a writing camp at Virginia University.

"We send them to university programs to demystify the college experience," said Judy. "They sleep in the dorms, eat at the cafeteria, meet other youth who look and talk like them, many from the same ethnic background. Once they've actually been there, they return transformed." Volunteers at ASAP work closely with students to apply for summer programs, fill out university applications, and inquire about financial aid. "Many kids are the first in their family to go to college," said Judy.

Mission High has also been rejuvenated. Athletes brag about grades in the dugout and try to out-perform one another on science exams. This year 55% of eligible seniors applied to a four-year college – four years ago, only 22% applied.

EYE ON THE BIG PICTURE

Studies reveal large numbers of public schools, especially those in regions of persistent poverty, are eligible for state, federal, and local funds but fail to apply because they are so busy with day-to-day operations. The Bay Area Partnership (BAP) focuses on acquiring needed dollars for these schools. By approaching educators, showing them how they qualify, and counseling on the grantwriting process, BAP gives schools – and therefore students – access to funds and programs they might otherwise never reach.

Proposition 49, which provides state funds for afterschool programs, is a particularly important funding stream – yet many schools do not have the capacity to access these resources. Through policy work, professional development, sustainability workshops, and consultation with districts, BAP tunes up grant applications for afterschool programs, breakfast-at-school programs, and nutrition education. Since 1997 BAP has leveraged more than $40 million in public and private dollars for youth programs in the Bay Area's lowest income communities. Our Education Program invests in partners like BAP that drive comprehensive education reform.

A LEGACY OF GIVING HELPS TODAY'S STUDENTS

Our donors look to The San Francisco Foundation to provide professional expertise and strategy to maximize their impact in our community. In 2000, the Delantoni Trust for Public Charity established a $3.785 million fund at the Foundation to address restructuring public educational institutions. $948,000 from the Delantoni Trust was granted last year, including a $300,000 grant to McClymond's Youth and Family Center in Oakland. In addition, $50,000 was granted for secondary school reforms. Lisa Villarreal, program officer for Education, and other Foundation staff provide the expert knowledge to ensure the guiding principles of legacy trusts like Delantoni are realized.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT + AFFORDABLE HOUSING

Finding affordable housing in the Bay Area is a daunting challenge. For low- and extremely low-income families and individuals, stable housing can lead to better health and a better way of life. We spearhead efforts to expand safe, long-term, affordable housing opportunities across the region.

MOVING BEYOND SHELTER

As the homeless population in San Francisco and across the country soared in the 1980s, Episcopal Community Services realized a new direction was needed to provide shelter for these individuals. While more than 200 people received a warm bed, two meals, and immediate relief each night at its Episcopal Sanctuary, it sought a new strategy to address the long-term issues of homelessness.

Founded by Bishop William Swing, a 2006 San Francisco Foundation Community Leadership Award winner, Episcopal Community Services not only supports a multitude of social services but also builds and manages new affordable housing. It helps homeless and low-income people find and keep housing through innovative projects like the Canon Kip Community House for homeless adults with disabilities; the Next Door Shelter for managed, short-term relief; the Skills Center, with vocational training and literacy and computer classes; the Canon Kip Senior Center with comprehensive senior services; and the Canon Barcus Community House, which provides housing for 47 formerly homeless families.

“In the Bay Area, the largest part of a family’s budget is devoted to housing. We were an early funder of Episcopal Community Services because they are a model for providing affordable housing for people who are homeless,” said Carol Lamont, program officer for Community Development. “Affordable housing has profound effects on the economy, transportation, jobs, public schools, and healthcare. It is a core element affecting many social problems in our region.”

CANON BARCUS IS HOME

With its pleasing balconies, peach and orange hues, and contemporary design, the Canon Barcus Community House deserves its place in architectural magazines. For Tom and Kim Silver and their children, it is simply home.

$405,000 in grants from fiscal year 2006 will assist in the production of an estimated 3,833 units of affordable housing for low-income households in the Bay Area.

The Silver family of four moved from a van parked on the streets to secure, stable, and permanent housing at Canon Barcus. The Silvers were relieved to finally find an affordable place to live in San Francisco, one of the most expensive cities in the nation. Large, clean, well-maintained apartments – coupled with multiple onsite services such as a St. Luke’s health clinic, family counseling, alcohol and drug treatment, mental health counseling, job training, and afterschool programs – provide the stability and resources that families like the Silvers need to get off, and stay off, the streets.

Supportive housing works. Currently 47 families with 105 children sleep in their own apartments at Canon Barcus. They don’t have to struggle to travel across town or worry about daycare to get needed social services. At Canon Barcus, professional help is onsite and accessible, and residents discover tangible opportunities to restore their lives.

INVESTING FOR THE FUTURE

The Bay Area Workforce Funding Collaborative invests in biotech and healthcare job training and supportive services. So far, more than 700 low-income and disadvantaged people have improved their job skills and earning capacity. The San Francisco Foundation organized the Collaborative and reached out to other foundations to participate. In the first grant cycle of $6 million, the Collaborative invested $2.1 million, matching $1.6 million from the State. $1.2 million was leveraged from employers and $1.1 million from community colleges and other public agencies. In the first grant cycle the Collaborative is comprised of an extraordinary array of regional and national funders: The San Francisco Foundation, the Walter and Elise Haas Fund, the Evelyn and Walter Haas, Jr. Fund, the Richard and Rhoda Goldman Fund, the Annie E. Casey Foundation, the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation, the Walter S. Johnson Foundation, the Gordon and Betty Moore Foundation, California Wellness Foundation, Levi Strauss Foundation, the Koret Foundation, the William Randolph Hearst Foundation, and The California Endowment.

2006 FAITHS Youth Leadership Awardees.

FAITHS YOUTH LEADERSHIP AWARDEES

Our FAITHS Youth Leadership Awards encourage future leaders by giving hands-on training to high school students, connecting them to the wider community, and developing leadership skills. This intensive program provides meaningful experiences in the world of philanthropy and nonprofits. For a complete list of FAITHS Youth Leadership Awardees, see page 67.

ARTS AWARDS PROGRAM

Artists are vital to the cultural wealth of the Bay Area. We recognize their creative spirit and relish their ability to illuminate the human experience through art. In partnership with community organizations, we support local artists working across the region. Last year, 34 individual artists were granted more than $90,000 in awards and fellowships. For a complete list of arts awardees, see page 67.

AWARDS

Individuals make a difference. Our awards programs celebrate local leaders, artists, neighborhood activists, and innovators while highlighting their connection to our region. Communities across the Bay Area are profoundly influenced by the impact of their work.

KOSHLAND CIVIC UNITY PROGRAM AWARDEES

Each year, the Koshland Civic Unity Program begins a five-year relationship with a neighborhood in the Bay Area. Local leaders, often unsung heroes outside their communities, are chosen for their commitment to creating positive, lasting change in their neighborhood. These individuals take the lead and, through professional development, translate their innovative, hands-on approach into solutions. The most recent awardees live and work in this year's selected neighborhood, the Bayview in San Francisco.

Many of our former fellows have gone on to become recognized leaders in the public, private, and nonprofit sectors.

COMMUNITY LEADERSHIP AWARDS

Great leaders are grounded in the life of their community, yet are never satisfied with the status quo. They seek out innovative solutions, take risks, and accomplish bold results. The Foundation recognizes the importance of leadership through our annual Community Leadership Awards. Individuals are awarded $10,000 and organizations $20,000 to continue their work improving lives and creating positive change. For more information on these Community Leadership Award winners, see page 66.

OUR STAFF

Our diverse, professional staff live the mission of the Foundation and are dedicated to providing excellent service for our donors and grantees. We are also your neighbors; we reside in cities and neighborhoods across the Bay Area and experience firsthand the positive impact local philanthropy has on our communities.
